How courses delivered by EIMF

Classroom courses

Classroom courses prepare participants for the computer based exams for each unit, covering the full syllabus with lots of exam style lecture examples and guided question practice. We provide a comprehensive study pack and set a final mock assessment for participants to complete ahead of real exams. We offer a range of morning and evening courses at our Nicosia and Limassol centre, and weekend synoptic preparation courses.

Distance online learning

Our complete study pack is complemented by pre-recorded online lectures covering every topic and with step by step explanations to help participants work through the lecture examples. Participants can study at their own pace and contact tutor at any time for extra help. In our package, we also include the printed books of the material

Study Material

EIMF has partnered with KAPLAN and all study material for classroom and distance learning is provided prepared by KAPLAN

Computer based assessments

Each unit is tested as either a computer based exam or assessment. The exams last between 90 minutes and 2.5 hours depending on the subject, and the pass mark is 70%. Participants can sit exams at the EIMF AAT Assessment centre.

Additional support and study resources

- Access to Kaplan online study resources and mock examinations
- Sample assessments: Participants can familiarise themselves with content type and question structures and try example assessment questions to practise their technique.
- E-learning modules These are designed to boost understanding and give participants a chance to test their skills. The modules include interactive tutorials, worksheets and animations focusing on a key topic.
- Green Light tests: Participants can judge how well they understand their learning areas and identify where they need to put in some more work. The tests also give students an idea of whether they are ready for the assessment

- Skills checklist: Participants can tick off the skills they have gained through each unit. They can also use the checklist to see all the new skills they'll gain when they progress to the next level.

Entry requirements

High school living certificate, completion of AAT level 2 qualification, or other relevant qualification such as the LCCI or other Accounting degree. Work experience in the sector will be consider as well.

Guided Learning Hours

Based on guided learning hours we suggest the above allocation as per the learning hours requirements suggested by AAT. The study hours in class will cover all material and provide revisions. The home study timing is hours that candidates must commit on their own to go through study material in between courses, access online resources and other additional material as instructed by tutors.

The study leave allocation to be provided before exams is suggested and can be altered to satisfy individual needs if needed. Additional study time might be required and that will depend on each individual's needs and experiences.
